Overview of the Novel

A Room with a View was published in 1908 and showcases Forster's keen observation of societal behaviors and class distinctions. The plot unfolds primarily in two contrasting settings: the picturesque and liberating landscape of Florence, Italy, and the repressive and conventional atmosphere of England. This juxtaposition serves as a metaphor for Lucy's internal conflict and her quest for authenticity.

Setting and Context

- Florence, Italy: The story begins in a pension in Florence, where Lucy and her companion, Charlotte Bartlett, find themselves amidst a group of travelers. The city's beauty and vibrancy symbolize freedom and the possibility of self-discovery.
- England: The return to England represents the restrictions of societal norms, where Lucy encounters the expectations of her social class and the pressures to conform.

Main Characters

1. Lucy Honeychurch: The protagonist, Lucy, embodies the struggle between societal expectations and personal desires. Her development throughout the novel reflects her journey toward self-awareness and the courage to pursue her own happiness.
