Understanding the Rebecca Sitton Spelling Program

The Rebecca Sitton Spelling Program is built on the premise that spelling should be integrated into the writing process rather than taught in isolation. This program focuses on a few key principles that guide its implementation:

1. Spelling as a Tool for Writing

The Sitton approach posits that spelling is not just about memorizing words; it is about helping students become better writers. By teaching spelling in the context of writing, students learn to apply their spelling knowledge in real-time, making it a practical skill rather than a rote exercise.

2. Emphasis on High-Frequency Words

The program identifies and emphasizes high-frequency words that students are likely to encounter in their writing. By focusing on these words, students can develop a solid foundation that will enhance their overall writing abilities.

3. Continuous Assessment and Progress Monitoring

Regular assessments are integral to the Sitton program. These assessments allow educators to monitor student progress and adapt instruction to meet the needs of individual learners. The goal is to ensure that all students achieve mastery of spelling concepts.

The Structure of the Program

Group activities that encourage collaboration can be beneficial. Students can work together to create stories or writing pieces using their spelling words, providing opportunities for peer feedback and support.
