Core Principles of Tiger Parenting

At the heart of battle hymn of the tiger mother by amy chua lies a set of core principles that define the tiger parenting style. Chua's approach is characterized by a belief that children are capable of much more than they or their peers might realize, and that pushing them rigorously is ultimately beneficial.

High Academic and Extracurricular Expectations

One of the main features of tiger parenting is the insistence on exceptional academic achievement and mastery of at least one musical instrument. Chua describes demanding long hours of practice and study, allowing little room for leisure activities or social distractions. This focus aims to build resilience, discipline, and competence.

Strict Rules and Limited Freedom

Tiger parenting involves setting clear and non-negotiable rules for children, with limited tolerance for disobedience or failure. Chua recounts forbidding activities like sleepovers, playdates, or watching television, arguing that these restrictions help children concentrate on their goals and develop a strong work ethic.

Parental Authority and Involvement

Chua's method emphasizes active parental involvement and authority.
