The Origins of Black History Month

Black History Month has its roots in the early 20th century, initiated by historian Carter G. Woodson. In 1926, Woodson established "Negro History Week" to promote the study and celebration of African American history. The week was chosen to coincide with the birthdays of Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglass, two pivotal figures in the fight for African American rights. The celebration expanded over the years, and in 1976, President Gerald Ford officially recognized February as Black History Month, encouraging all Americans to celebrate the rich history and contributions of African Americans.

Black History Month serves multiple purposes:

1. Awareness: It raises awareness about the struggles and triumphs of African Americans throughout history.
