Understanding the Casper Exam

Unlike traditional standardized tests that focus on academic knowledge, the Casper test emphasizes the candidate's ability to interact with others and respond to challenging situations. The exam consists of:

Types of Casper Exam Practice Questions

There are two main types of questions that candidates can expect on the Casper exam. Familiarity with both types is essential for comprehensive preparation.

1. Situational Judgment Questions

These questions present candidates with hypothetical scenarios that require them to choose the most appropriate response. For example:

- A colleague is struggling with a heavy workload and asks for your help. However, you also have your deadline to meet. What do you do?

Candidates must analyze the situation and make a choice that reflects their values and interpersonal skills.

2. Video-Based Questions

In this format, candidates watch a video scenario and respond to questions based on their observations. These questions often revolve around ethical dilemmas or challenging interpersonal situations. For example:

- After watching a video where a patient expresses dissatisfaction with their care, how would you respond to the patient's concerns?

These questions assess both the candidate's empathy and problem-solving abilities.
