In this article, we will delve into the details surrounding the Chicago cyanide murders, the key events that transpired, the investigation that followed, and the broader implications of this shocking crime.

Background of the Chicago Cyanide Murders

The Chicago cyanide murders, also known as the Tylenol murders, occurred in September 1982 when several individuals died after consuming cyanide-laced acetaminophen capsules. This incident was particularly alarming because it raised concerns about product tampering, which was previously unheard of in the pharmaceutical industry. The victims included:

- Mary Kellerman, a 12-year-old girl
- Adam Janus, a 27-year-old man
- Mary's parents, who also consumed the tainted product
- Another victim, a 31-year-old mother of two

These tragic deaths sent shockwaves throughout the community and beyond, leading to widespread panic as people began to question the safety of over-the-counter medications.
