Understanding Compound-Complex Sentences

A compound-complex sentence is a combination of two or more independent clauses and one or more dependent clauses. This structure allows for more intricate and nuanced expressions in writing.

Components of Compound-Complex Sentences

To fully grasp compound-complex sentences, one must understand their components:

1. Independent Clauses: These clauses can stand alone as complete sentences. They contain a subject and a predicate. For example:

- "I wanted to go for a walk."
- "It started to rain."

2. Dependent Clauses: Unlike independent clauses, dependent clauses cannot stand alone. They provide additional information but rely on independent clauses to form a complete thought. For example:

- "Because it started to rain."
- "Although I wanted to go for a walk."

3. Combining Clauses: A compound-complex sentence combines these clauses. For example:

- "Although I wanted to go for a walk, it started to rain, and I decided to stay indoors."
