Understanding Compound Words

Compound words are formed when two or more words are combined to create a new word with a specific meaning. For instance, the words "tooth" and "brush" come together to form "toothbrush." Compound words can be categorized into three main types:

- Closed compounds: These are written as a single word (e.g., mailbox, basketball).
- Hyphenated compounds: These use a hyphen to connect the words (e.g., mother-in-law, check-in).
- Open compounds: These consist of separate words that work together as a single unit (e.g., ice cream, post office).

Understanding these categories helps students recognize and create compound words more effectively.
