- Be Respectful: Keep in mind that your partner may hold different views. Approach the conversation with curiosity rather than judgment.
- Use "I" Statements: Express your thoughts and feelings using "I" statements to avoid sounding accusatory. For example, "I feel concerned about..." instead of "You always...".
- Listen Actively: Give your partner space to express their views without interruptions. Show that you value their perspective by nodding, summarizing, or asking clarifying questions.
- Be Open to Disagreement: Understand that it's okay to disagree. The goal is not to change each other's minds but to understand each other better.
